

Shavuot

The Line In The Sand

Rood Review

Restoring the Hebrew roots of the Christian Faith

May 2026

Let's get something straight: Pentecost is not a quaint little holiday for polite religious observance. It is a line-in-the-sand moment. It is a wake-up call most people have completely slept through.

The Hebrew word "Shavuot" (aka Pentecost in Greek) means weeks. Seven full weeks from Passover. Not guessed. Not tradition-driven. The idea is to literally count them, so count them carefully — all 50 days.

In 2026, Shavuot begins May 23 at sunset on the 49th day of the counting of the omer, the count that started on The Day of First Fruits. It's not some muddled, man-made tradition over the centuries. This one's a commandment from the Almighty (Deuteronomy 16:9-12) — that started at a mountain on fire.

At Mount Sinai, the Almighty didn't whisper suggestions. He thundered His Torah from heaven. Fire. Smoke. Fear. Authority. This was not religion, it was revelation. The Creator of the universe declared His instructions to a people who had just been dragged out of slavery.

Fast forward centuries. Same feast. Same appointed time. But now something explosive happens again.

The disciples are gathered at the Temple to celebrate Shavuot. Suddenly, ancient deja vu strikes — the same power and authority at Mt. Sinai is poured out in tongues of spiritual fire, the very Spirit of YeHoVaH himself filling the crowd, enabling them to speak His Word, regardless of their language.

Coincidence? Not a chance. The Torah was given in fire. The Spirit was given in fire. And yet people today try to separate the two, as if the Almighty changed His mind.

He didn't.

The Torah and the Spirit are not enemies, they are one. Always have been. Shavuot is much more than the celebration of crops. It's about covenant. It's about power. It's your line-in-the-sand moment: Are you going to walk in what the Almighty has already spoken — or keep playing religious games?

See you when the smoke clears.

Faith & Works

Love Gift Collection May 2026

PRAY • LISTEN • ACT
with guest Ed Doss

If you've ever shared your Torah-pursuant faith with someone, you know the argument: "We're saved by faith, not by works." It can be difficult to explain your position to someone who doesn't understand that "works" is just another term for "obedience."

Ed Doss is a popular YouTuber who has made it his mission to help people understand faith, works, wickedness, righteousness, and why the Apostle Peter said that Paul is so "difficult to understand."

Faith and Works will equip you to properly understand what it means to "be under the law," what it means to "obey the law," and how to explain the difference.
